SIX DEGREES HOUSING, INNOVATIVE SHORT-TERM HOUSING NETWORK, CREATED FOR ENTERTAINMENT COMMUNITY BY THREE INDUSTRY VETERANS

Six Degrees Housing, an innovative concept in short-term housing for the entertainment community, has been created by three long-time industry veterans, Tod Maitland (film), Sarah Orlinsky (theatre and real estate) and Luc Delfau (internet/social networking). Primarily intended for housing while on location and world tours, the free service will also extend to vacations or any home-away-from home situation.

Six Degrees Housing is the first short-term housing network for the entertainment community actually created by industry professionals, who have a profound understanding of their colleagues' needs. Designed as a free tool to help the traveling entertainment professional deal with the rigours of housing, it includes options like allowing property owners to receive replies only from fellow industry colleagues if they wish, while at the same time providing a free searchable database of industry friendly properties available from private owners, brokers and corporate housing worldwide.

Six Degrees Housing allays the fears of renting one's home through mutual professional connections and links to industry sites to research whom they may be renting to or from. "We all live by our reputations in this business," says Tod Maitland, "and that connection creates a sense of confidence and security. Industry members have properties around the world and travel all the time; we just created a place to bring the community together.

Tod Maitland is one of film's most prolific and respected sound mixers, a three-time Academy Award nominee for "Born on the Fourth of July," "JFK" and "Seabiscuit." Working for some of the top directors in motion pictures, including Oliver Stone, Martin Scorsese, Woody Allen, Robert Redford, Sydney Pollack, Julie Taymor and Jon Turteltaub, Among his nearly 75 credits are "Tootsie," "Hannah and Her Sisters," "Cape Fear," "The Doors," "Quiz Show," "Donnie Brasco," "I Am Legend," "The Producers," "Enchanted," "Julie & Julia" and "Wall St 2."

Sarah Orlinsky was born into the theatre business and became world tour manager for her Tony nominated father's company. Raised in France and NY and fluent in French, Spanish and English, Sarah toured shows around the world for 10 years before settling in NY where she entered the real estate industry with Brown Harris Stevens becoming a top seller for the company. Sarah specializes in high-end sales and rentals and is a conduit for the Entertainment industry looking for housing in NYC.

Luc Delfau is a software engineer and entrepreneur with more than 20 years of experience in both startups and large established companies. As a co-founder, Luc built InsideCrowd LLC, a social networking platform. He has also designed a financial market radar system for Townsend Analytics, which acquired HotTrend.com, a company he also co-founded. Film experience includes particle modeling system software and computer-generated images for the film "The 1001 Nights" by Philippe De Brocas. Luc also designed software for Reuters America, Effix Systems, and SPNC.
